

Hi [REDACTED] I would like to see checks made by professionals appointed by a trusted government body. That is it should not be left to the institution to chose. Child abuse can be contagious if I may use this term, we know that abusers have been moved from one institution to an other to hide their abuse. It is imperative that this be gotten right, as I see the commissions concern and rightly so. I also think that the education of these should be made available as earliest as a child can understand, right from wrong. I think that accreditation should be left to a newly appointed body picked for this purpose by government and to cover all states and territories and it should consist of doctors who specialise on these maters. I thank you and hope that you would look at some of these consideration.

Sincerely yours
Joseph Azzopardi.
